

The current cable and satellite cartel that requires customers to buy dozens or even hundreds of channels that they never watch should be broken up. Each channel should be subject to traditional market pricing. Those channels for which there is no demand should be dropped -- not forced on customers who have no use for them. Let the market and not "big brother" control our TV purchases.